Mr. Marcos said, "One of the perceived obstacles to the achievement of national unity is the detention of persons who have been charged with subversion, rebellion, sedition, illegal possession of fire-arms [and who] may be judged to be deserving of society's under-standing and forgiveness.

In accordance with my call to national reconciliation and unity, it is now imperative to proclaim an amnesty in favor of said deserving persons, even without further inquiry into their guilt or innocence and without waiting for final judg-ment by the court or tribunal before which said charges are pending."

Murder Included

He said persons accused of murder, if it was committed in the course of subversion or rebellion, could also qualify for amnesty.

Applicants were given up to Sept. 30 to seek amnesty. Those in jail can do so within six months. The amnesty decree appeared to be tailored for Mr. Aquino, 45, a former senator and potential presidential candidate before his arrest the day martial law was declared in the Philippines nearly six years ago. Last november, a military tribunal found Mr. Aquino guilty of subversion, murder and illegal possession of arms, and he was sentenced to death by firing squad.
The case is on appeal.

Amsterdam Dilemma: How to Keep the Working Class in City

By Jonathan Kandell

Municipal officials, whose predecessors issued dire predictions of the decay of the city two decades ago, have ample reason to congratulate themselves because the inner city has preserved its historical aura along with an enviable mixture of middle-class residential and husiness But there is little sense of satisfaction at City Hall. The mayor is troubled by the flight of working-class people from the old center's residences, which they can no longer afford, and the Municipal Council is struggling unsuccessfully to devise a housing program that will keep them from heing displaced by the middle class.

"In 10 years the number of affluent people in the city center may overwhelm and push out the last remnants of the working class," said Jan Buisman, a housing official in the Socialist-dominated City Hall. "The political power of the Socialists is hased on working-class people. If they move out we move out."

Migratory Trend

The exodus of workers has overtaken a number of cities in Western Europe. In some cases it means the large-scale transfer of poorer fami-lies to suburban tocations that are even less equipped than the inner cities to provide adequate housing and services. And the transition period in urhan neighborhoods can tead to social tensions between hlue-collar and middle-class residents.

During the last 20 years, Paris has lost a half million inhabitants. most of them working-class people. Its population — the 2.6 million living within the freeways that encircle the city - is no greater today than it was in 1880. Other French urban centers such as Lyons and Bordeaux have registered similar declines, while their working-class suhurban helts have swelled. In Le Marais, a 17th century neighborhood between the Bastille and the Seine, hundreds of blue-collar families have handed together in so-called defense committees, seeking legal and political aid against the encroschment of the more affluent

Restored and Vital, Center Becomes an Affluent Ghetto

Greater London is losing residents at the rate of 100,000, or nearly 1.5 percent, a year, with the exodus being led by skilled workers in search of cheaper housing. In Greenwich, Fulham, Kentish Town, Islington and other sections, middle-class people are moving into bluecollar strongholds. The influx - known derogatorily as gentrification - has produced impressive renovation of decayed structures, but it has also sparked working-class resentment because the newer residents tend to take up more living space and drive up the cost of housing.

Visible Impact

But nowhere in Western Europe have the dynamics of the working-class exodus been as visible as in Amsterdam, a city of about 900,000 whose old center combines a thriving business community, affluent residences and the main points of attraction for hordes of tourists from

As recently as 1957, a municipal report on the Jordaan - a 240-acre central district bounded by four canals — lamented the departure of more well-to-do persons and warned that it was becoming the quarter of the economically weakest families." Citing dilapidated houses, it noted that "they often present a mean appearance since little attention

In the tas; few years, city and national authorities passed a series of fiscal measures aimed at upgrading the district, restoring its numerous historical landmarks and bringing in middle-class families to help halance the quarter socially. Postwar rent controls were relaxed; landlords who carried out extensive improvements were allowed substantial increases, putting many apartments beyond the reach of blue-collar

About 8,000 huildings in Amsterdam - more than 800 in the Jordaan district - were declared historical monuments by the Ministry of Culture, enabling affluent residents to purchase a town house or warehouse with a small down payment and on easy long-term credit with a total investment of $25,000 to $50,000. The ministry will then subsidize the sizable renovation costs — from $50,000 to $200,000 — if the new owners agree to conform to historical architecture and design.

Property-Tax Equity -

Well-to-do homeowners are also encouraged by low property taxes that are uniform throughout the city, so that it does not matter whether they live in the fashionable canal district or in the dreary 19th century working-class neighborhoods close to the city limits.

The measures taken to fend off the trends warned against in the 1957 report have been spectacularly successful in maintaining and restoring the historical ambiance of the Jordaan leading to a large influx of middle-class people. In 1975 the authorities announced a new fiveyear housing policy because the district's population was declining, mainly as a result of the working-class flight.

"A first objective," the new policy states, "is to halt the drop in the population figure and to gradually come to a more balanced popula-tion structure, regarding both age and family size as well as income. Other objectives are to see that the Jordaan project does not compel inhabitants to leave the district for reasons of space, finance or on social grounds and that the incomes of the present population do not prohibit people from occupying newly built and improved — including historical - premises.

Attracting working-class people back into the Jordaan is proving a far more difficult problem than drawing the middle class there. A plan. begun in 1972, to build 200 housing units for low-income families every year, has led to fewer than 100 units in the last five years. "Social housing is simply too expensive to hulld," said Jan Buisman, the city housing official, who noted that the four-story limit in the old center makes high rents necessary.

Efforts to mobilize the remaining working class families against the middle-class influx have been fruitless. "It is difficult to make it clear to people that their den is in danger and is not going to be left standing much longer," a spokesman for one of the neighborhood action groups said. "There is obviously a defense mechanism at work — they just do not want to hear that they are in danger."

Cuban Actions Divide Nonaligned Bloc

WASHINGTON, June 11 (NYT)

— The 85-member movement of nonaligned nations is undergoing serious strains as a result of pressure by Cuba and others for adoption of pro-Seviet positions. Some members strain of an extra sult of pressure of pro-Seviet positions. Some members strain of an extra sult of pressure of the movement and the Cuban role is to bring it closer to the Soviet Union."

The issue of Cuba's qualification of the control of the movement have been sharpened recently by border wars between member states.

Disputes came into the open three weeks ago at a meeting of the movement's 25-member coordinating bureau in Havana. Trouble came in part from an attempt to revise goals of the group, which of-ten functions in the United Nations as a single voting bloc.

Representatives of Yugoslavia, Indonesia and other moderate countries that attended the Havana meetings, which took place from May 18 to 21, contended in interviews that Cuba, with the support of Victnam and Angola, was trying to make the movement into what one called "an adjunct of Soviet any superpower or hioc."

India, Yugoslavia, Indonesia and some African countries opposed the radicals strongly in Havana, he

Expulsion a Prospect

Somalia, in a recent memorandum to the United Nations, asked that Cuba, which became a member of the movement in 1961, be expelled from the world organiza-tion for its intervention in Ethiopia, along with the Soviet Union, in that country's war against Somali insurgents.

Yugoslavs and Indonesians have asserted that if Cuba continues to behave "intolerably" — that is, in an aligned or interventionist manner - then a move to expel it might

Last week Miljan Komatina, Assistant Foreign Secretary of Yugo-slavia, said in Belgrade that any engagement of Cuban forces in Ethiopia's struggle to suppress the Eritrean secessionist movement would be unacceptable to the nonaligned nations. The nonaligned nations demanded to know when Cuba would withdraw its troops from Africa, he also said.

Moderates among the members said that they were disturbed not only by Cuba's "radicalizing" course, but by the fact that that country was scheduled to be the host for the sixth meeting of nonaligned leaders in the summer of 1979. This year the 85 foreign ministers are scheduled to meet in Beigrade starting July 25.

The nonaligned movement was started by Presidents Tito of Yugoslavia, Sukarno of Indonesia and Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, and Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India, as an effort to set a neutral course for developing countries between the great-power blocs of East and West. The movement includes such diverse members as

Formula Dispute

At the last conference in Sri Lanka two years ago, the formulation of the movement's goals was that il opposed "imperialism, colonialism, neo-colonialism, racism and all other forms of foreign domination." The understanding was that the phrase "all other forms of for-cign domination" alluded princi-pally to the Soviet Union.

A Yugoslav diplomat said that at the start of the Havana sessions last month, Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca Peoli of Cuba presented a new draft in which this passage was missing. Two days of argument followed, after which Cuba agreed to a formula that spoke of opposi-tion to "all forms of foreign domination." Some members were unhappy with this compromise.

nitting that the change might seem trivial to outsiders, the Yugo-slav maintained that it typified a wide range of positions sympathetie to the Soviet Union that Cuba bad taken. Until two years ago, he noted, the Soviet approach to the movement was characterized by deep suspicion and occasional hosquility, much like that of the United rebels in his Marxist-ruled country

Ten days ago, Mr. Carter said that in view of Cuba's armed intervention in African disputes, it was "a joke" for the Havana government to pose as nonaligned. A Record 97,500 Dominoes Toppled

NEW YORK, June 11 (UPI) - Bob Speca Jr. set a world record for toppling a continuous chain of dominoes but failed to reach his goal of 100,000 because of a bumbling TV cameraman.

The 21-year-old "World Domino Wizard" spent nine days arranging the 100,000 dominoes in a pattern of names, figure eights, hoops and whirls on the 5,000-square-foot floor of the ballroom at Manhattan Center.

Michael Murpby, 8, a bemophiliac. gently knocked over the first domino as Mr. Speca watched with representatives of the National Hemophilia Foundation, which sponsored the benefit event, and a crush of reporters, photographers and cameramen. The dominoes fell at a speed of 3 mph or 30 per second. Officials said that the old record of 50,000 dominoes, which Mr. Speca set last June, would be broken in 17 minutes and 45 seconds.

"Twenty seconds before the new record is set." Mr. Speca shouted as he glanced at his stop watch. "Ten seconds." Then cheers rang out and a sweating Mr. Speca raised his arms in triumph as the dominoes fell through an "I Love New York" formation.

But then the ABC network camerman made his goof. "I feel terrible." Manny Alpert said. "I was leaning over for a better shot of the American flag [formation] when my press card fell out of my shirt pocket. The card fluttered from the balcony and onto a line of dominoes below. Suddenly, dominoes were falling in two directions. Mr. Speca pulled three out of the line to avoid a situation in which dominoes traveling in different directions would fall against each other and stop.

Representatives of the Guiness Book of World

Records said that they were certain of a record. They gave Mr. Speca credit for 97,500 dominoes.

Reformers See Bias for Carter

U.S. Democrats Adopt Rules for 1980

Outnumbered reformers shouted shame, shame, shame," during the debate Friday and contended the new rules were stacked to aid President Carter's renomination chances. But the debate took only a few hours, and the reformers were outnumbered. Many privately conceded that the shape of the rules would not matter in 1980 as much as Mr. Carter's record.

That debate followed national ehairman John White's plea to "let us put behind 10 years of preoccupation with rules infighting." But when the national committee dealt with issues instead, it ignorned the political topic of the week — the revolt by taxpayers in California.

While Mr. White said in an interview that he expected the tax revolt to be "the major issue" of this year's campaign, he did not discuss it in his speech. Vice President Mondale, while noting the need for budgetary restraint, stressed the

Byrd Defends Spending

Carter Chides Congress on Tax Revolt

By Judith Miller

WASHINGTON, June 11 (NYT) President Carter has gently chided Congress for excessive spending and failing to discern the message that California voters sent politicians in their overwhelming support for drastic slashes in state property taxes.

Mr. Carter, in remarks released yesterday, referred specifically to Congress' unwillingness to cut income taxes by more than $20 billion, as the administration proposed last January. "They finally, reluciantly, agreed to consider $13 or $14 billion. But our proposal to cut taxes is much higher than the Congress has shown any willingness to accept." Mr. Carter said.

The president's remarks were made in a news conference Friday with non-Washington editors and news directors, and released by the White House yesterday morning.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia defended Congress' recent record of "fiscal restraint." He said that while the California vote to reduce property taxes reflected "the mood of the people," Congress had for some time "charted a course in the direction of that mood." Sen. Byrd said that the first con-gressional budget resolution with

Textile Accord

On Health Set WASHINGTON, June 11 (UPI) - The White House has reached agreement with Labor Secretary Ray Marshall on regulations to protect textile workers from brown lung disease — rules the administration says will not be inflationary.

."The president's concerns have been taken care of, the peoples concerns, the cotton textile workers' concerns, the concerns of the nation about additional costs of inflation," said Charles Schultze the president's economic adviser.

The announcement came after Mr. Marshall met with Mr. Carter about a memo from Mt, Schultze that said ther president wanted cost-cutting revisions to be made in the proposed health regulations. Health experts believe exposure to cotton dust causes byssinosis, or "brown lung" disease.

Mr. Schultze said that during the meeting "an approach to the regu-lation was agreed upon that will meet the president's request, both leading candidates to win a much in respect to economic concerns greater percentage of the delegates than they did of the popular vote. and to insure full protection for workers' health.'

He also said he doubted that the California tax-slashing resolution would adversely affect the $13.5hillion energy tax proposal under consideration by the Senate-House conference committee, although the measure, if approved, would result in higher taxes. Violence in Turkey Kills Seven Persons

ISTANBUL, June 11 (AP) -Seven persons were killed in armed attacks during the weekend in separate nutbursts of the political vio-lence that have taken more than 350 lives in Turkey this year.

Police said they found the bodies of two youths in a garage in the center of Istanbul. In a separate incident, gunmen opened fire from a speeding car into a crowded cafe. One youth was killed instantly and twn others died in a bospital during emergency surgery. The other two deaths occurred in Elazig, eastern Turkey, where gunmen unleashed a hail of pistol fire on a high school student, and in altalya, a coastal town in the mediterranean, where a theology student was stabbed tn

His outright rejection of any spe-cial status for Corsica would appear to foreshadow continued re-luctance to grant increased power to any of France's regions at the expense of central government

On the first presidential visit to Corsica since separatist agitation began rising here four years ago. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing told audiences that "there are problems on Corsica, but Corsica is not a problem." He said this island faced social and economic problems of modernization similar in nature to those throughout France, although more acute because of Corsica's past isolation and feudal traditions.

Corsican separatists and even many moderates bere argue that the island is suffering a population drain because young Corsicans can-not find jobs at home. Most of the island's income is derived from retirement checks and social security payments. The 250,000 population is almost equally divided now between nanve Corsicans and outsiders, the latter mostly mainland Frenchmen and the pieds noirs (refugees from former French North Africa).

'Walking Bomb' Pays Demand; Spanish Police Remove Device

MADRID, June 11 (UPI) - Psychiatrist Manuel Cabaleiro spent two days as a "walking bomb" and lived to tell about it.

The 35-year-old Spaniard described how a cool, smooth-talking stranger, holding a pistol, taped a sensitive bomb to his chest.

Such gadgets, which apparently will explode if anyone but an expert tries to remove them, have killed three persons in Spain in 13 months. In each case the aim has been extortion of large sums of British Airways flies the 100-passenger plane out of London; Air France runs trans-Atlantic flights from Paris. The British carrier recently made a survey of its Lon-don-New York customers.

"We find that 43 percent of our passengers have flown [Concorde] more than once," said Gordon Davidson, who directs the British operation, "so we're moving away from the novelty phase." The survey also showed, he said, that almost balf these repeaters had made three or more Concorde flights. Five repeaters have made more than 50 flights each: two business-women from Ohio and Florida, diplomats from the Middle East and Africa, and the vice president of a Tennessee pencil-manufacturing firm who apparently is the record holder with 63.

Overall, failure to get access to other promising galeways, along with the limited potential on some routes that the two carriers have had to settle for, mean that the five British and four French Concordes are still running up painful operat-ing losses. But despite one-way ticket costs of $833 from London and $862 from Paris, business to New York has been as good as or better than expectations.

Good New York Figures

Between the start of London-New York service and June I, an average of 73 of the 100 seats avail-able on each flight were sold. The figure for the last five or six weeks of that period was 83 percent. The 60 percent rate on seats 3500 is being met not only on the Paris-New York flights, hut also on twice-weekly Paris-Rio de Janeiro flights. On the other hand, loads to Washington have fallen significantly since the sunt of New York service. And loads are nowhere near the break-even level on flights from Paris to Caracas, and from London

Ban All Chemical Weapons

Ever since World War I, when poison gas was first used in combat, it has somehow seemed more barbaric to kill people with chemicals than with bullets. Unlike bullets and conventional bombs, chemicals — espe-cially the "supertoxic" nerve gases developed since World War II — hold out the terrifying prospect of mass annihilation. It is good news, therefore, that the Uoited States and the Soviet Union are within sight of an agreement to ban chemical weapons altogether.

The negotiations began in 1976 and have intensified since. Despite a commanding lead in preparations for chemical war, Moscow seems as eager as Washington for a treaty to end development and production of chemical weapons and to destroy existing stockpiles. Soviet leaders evidently realize that although the United States has not matched their substantial buildup it could do so at modest

Agreement is being delayed by tough problems of verification. Both sides seem to recognize that some on-site inspections are essential. Yet neither is eager to have inspectors roaming around its chemical plants. Experts are convinced, however, that once a nation destroys its stockpile of chemical weapons, any effort to acquire a new capability to fight a chemical war could be detected witbout elaborate snooping. Such an effort would involve not only production and testing. but also equipping and training military forces in ways that could not evade detection. The experts ogree, too, that reliable ways can be found to monitor destruction of existing stocks and production facilities.

Thus far, negotiations have been wholly bilateral. As with the 1967 nuclear oon-proliferation treaty, the two superpowers propose to present a chemical warfare pact to the rest of the world. But a strong case can be made for soon widening the talks. The most thorny verification issues can be reserved for bilateral negotiation. Meanwhile, it ought to be possible to bring in the experience and the views of other interested governments.

It is relevant, for example, that West Germany's highly developed chemical industry has been subject to international inspection for more than two decades under the treaty by which the governments of Western Europe consented to German rearmament. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt bas urged other nations to learn from his country's experience in making an international ban on chemical weapons effective and yet "not prejudice the legitimate interests of industry

So often in recent years. "disarmament" has in practice meant relatively modest measures of arms control. The chemical warfare prohibitions under discussion would provide an effective means to eliminate altogether a potent means of mass destruction.

Free Speech: Two Celebrations

So the Nazis may, if they choose, march in Skokie. The lower courts have overthrown local ordinances aimed against the group; a permit bas been issued: and on June 25, barring the unlikely intervention of the Supreme Court, 50 or 100 U.S. admirers of Adolf Hitler will have the right to gather before the village hall. That, in our view, is as it should

Serious arguments to deny the Nazis the rights of speech and assembly have been raised in the months since they first announced the plan to rally in the predominantly Jewish village. Three of the arguments have special force: That such a march in such a place would violate the rights of several thousand former inmates of concentration camps and others who lost relatives to Hitler's gas ovens; that it would constitute an intolerable provocation to those victims of Nazism and so lead to violence; and that a group like the Nazis, which would deprive other people in the U.S. of their freedoms. has no claim to the protection of the Consti-

We respect these arguments, but cannol accept them. The first could have been used against civil rights marchers whose demonstrations deeply offended residents of such Southern cities as Selma, Ala; free speech by its nature often means speech that will offend someone. The second argument would . penalize peaceful demonstrators for the violence that might be committed against them; it was to prevent such violence that Lyndon Johnson dispatched federal troops to Selma. The third argument has frequently been used against other fringe groups; some of those who oppose the Nazi march would cry foul if a Communist rally were banned, even though Communists are not famed for their commitment to free speech.

Taken together, these arguments would permit those in power to hold down the weak. Once it is left to the majority to choose which groups are entitled to demonstrate for their views, the rights of every unpopular minority are jeopardized. The ragtag gang that calls itself the National Socialist Party has won the contempt it deserves, but as long as it remains within the law, its rights must be assured. We trust that the counterdemonstrators who propose to gather in Skokie on June 25 will keep that in mind. It will be the job of the police to help them do so.

Tomorrow, two weeks before the scheduled march in Skokie, a very different sort of gathering will take place in New York City. A National Convocation on Free Speech, designed to clarify and reaffirm the principles of the First Amendment, has been organized by the American Civil Liberties Union. One of the subjects to be debated is what limits, if any, should be placed on hate-mongering

The ACLU has suffered a severe loss of memnersnu and revenue as a result of its efforts on behalf of the Nazis in Skokie. But il did what il had lo do in such a case, what it exists to do. The right of free speech rests on the premise that the airing of obnoxious opinion is more beneficial to society than its . suppression; that it is better for citizens to choose among contending ideas than for the state to do the choosing for Ihem; Ihal minority voices must be protected against the power and prejudice of the majority.

So this idea will be celebrated twice this month — at the National Convocation on Free Speecb in New York City and then at the Nazi rally in Skokie. Both events, in their contrary ways, should reaffirm the vision of the creators of our Constitution.

President Pinochet Should Go

Augusto Pinochet may have ordered or at least countenanced the assassination of his most telling critic, Orlando Letelier, in Wasbington 21 months ago; a colleague of the former ambassador also died in the plot. If this is true, there is, then, not only justice but a sweet irony in the possibility that the investigation into Mr. Letelier's murder may lead to the end of President Pinochet's stay in pow-

It is no surprise that, in Chile, dismay and anger over the investigation are yielding in part to the feeling that the Pinochet government has outlived its usefulness. It is one thing to act against "communist" forces within Chile; it is quite another to reach out to kill a critic in the capital of the very country on which Chile is most dependent - and to be found out - and to have the very man held responsible for the assassination remain

As it happens, a certain measure of normalization has been returning to Chile. Political arrests have diminished, and political prisoners have been released, though there has been no accounting for the bundreds

It begins to look as if Chilean President who "disappeared" in police custody. The people at the bottom have not benefited, but the economy has otherwise advanced. Fissures within the junta have produced limited, semi-open politics, and the leash on the press has loosened.

We note those developments not to congratulate the junta but to make the point that President Pinochet no longer bas a reasonable pretext, if he ever did, for thwarting Chile's return to constitutional government.

Chile, after all. has not only a recent but a rich tradition of constitutional government. one going back well into the 19th century. In the Christian Democratic Party, moreover, it has a respected and substantially intact political organization that, with other political elements, could assume the transitional task of steering Chile back to its democratic traditions. In short, although the continuation in office of President Pinochet means national disgrace and continuing international isolation, the alternative to him is not chaos. Does he wish to be remembered, in some measure, as a patriot? Then he should resign.

China: Vietnam's Long Memory

By William Beecher

W toen years ago, wheo the best and the brightest of U.S. officials were first ginning up a strate-gic rationale for an active involvement in Vietnam, it was that Moscow and Peking had cleverly come up with an alternative to overt aggression to challenge the West.
The North Vietnamese and

Vietcong, it was asserted, were merely surrogates in a new, ambig-uous form of aggressioo, so-called people's wars of national liber-ation. Unless the challenge was met and repelled, important chunks of the globe would be toppled like so many dominos into the Communist

Recalling that, it is not a little ironic these days to read of border clashes and ideological slugging belween Peking, of mounting frictions be-tween Peking and Hanoi, and of bloody pitched battles between the forces of Hanoi and those of Phnom Penh.

Reluctantly, Hanoi has agreed to permit Chinese ships to call at many of its ports to take out refugees. But, interestingly, it has for-bidden draft-age young men to leave with their families.

It's not that Vietnam has a shortage of recruits for its armed forces, and probably not that its labor force is all that short-handed. More likely it doesn't want to let go of a the country intimately, speak its language and might just someday come back wearing the uniform of China's People's Liberation Army.

Long Memory

For the Vietnamese do not easily forget that for 1.000 years they were ruled by China, by force. As best can be determined, the Vietnamese have been pulling pres-sure on their Chinese to conform to the same harsh regimen as the rest of the population. No more blackmarketeering or private shops, no more hiding of wealth, no shirking of work in the fields or in reconstruction. Opposes A-Test Ban

Indiscreet

Schlesinger's courageous though indiscreet advocacy of higher arms spending in 1975 ended with President Ford firing him as Secretary of Defense. Schlesinger is perceived by some defense-oriented Democrats in Coogress as Mr. Carter's sullimate salvation, whom he eventoally will call upon to pick up the pieces. But to do this, Schlesinger must establish a record of having warned the president that present policies lead to disaster. How can this be done unless Schlesinger throws discretion to the winds and trespasses directly into national security? The answer is that the legal jurisdiction of his De-partment of linergy includes the nuclear-testing laboratories former-ly under the old Atomic linergy Cummission: Schlesinger has the duly of certifying the reliability of the national stockpile.

Schlesinger's experts at the linergy Department began early to ob-struct Warnke's push for quick negotiation of a zero-yield test bantreaty. With atmospheric tests barred by the 1963 treaty and underground tests limited to 150 kilotons by the 1974 treaty, the national laboratories say that it is already difficult to certify reliability of the stockpile: with no testing it will be impossible. As for the Soviets, only continual on-sité inspection cauld verify compliance with a zero-yield ban, and Moscow flatly rejects it.

Such misgivings by both Department of Energy and JCS experts led to their exclusion from hushbush U.S.-British talks here in mid-April. Nor were they consulted be-fore Mr. Carter signed Presidentia. As long as I stayed on the Autobahn and nobody knew I bad something in the trunk, they wouldn't search my car.

"The road is heavily patrolled by East German police, but their car would probably not be noticed. It was an East German economy car called a Trabant — an ugly little thing that breaks down all the time. Anytime you drive down an East German road you see about three or four of them every hundred miles sitting beside the road hroken

The next day Mr. Van Norman and life contact made a trial run over the route, spotting the restaurant and locating possible pickup points places where the road was straight and flat enough so that cars approaching from either direc-tion could be spotted well in the

Drove On

Mr. Vao Norman drove south for three more hours to the border in the comfort of his Mercedes, listening to Armed Forces Radio and singing along with the Eagles and Eltoo John. Then he cootinued on to a spot near Nuremberg, "where a friend who knew of the plan was waiting for me." On June 24 he went back to Berlin to try again.

He made the ruo three more times between June 24 and July 2 on prearranged contingency dates, but the East German family was never there. Each time the setup was the same. The contact man would fly in to rent the Mercedes, "because I wasn't old enough to rent a car."

He also would reimburse Mr. Van Norman for expenses such as his plane tieket and hotel, but nn other money, Mr. Van Norman says, changed hands. It is unlikely that his repeated trips were noticed, because the Autobahns carry a heavy load of traffic, including many regular commuters.

After the family failed to show up July 2, Mr. Van Norman flew to England, where he had first been approached about the smuggling effort the year before. A church camp counselor in Minnesota, he had learned as a teen-ager about a Lutheran center in the English Midlands called Harthrop Hall and had worked there as a gardener for most of 1976. The center's international staff included many religious refugees from all over the world and it was there that another staff member asked him if he would be

"But then I thought that here I was, with oo wife or children. If I got caught, it would only be a year or two out of my life. It seemed like a little enough thing to do to help somebody."
At first the escape had been planned for that summer, but there were delays. Mr. Van Norman was told to return to the United States and come back the following year. Early last year he was contacted by phone and told to be in Berlio June

"I had been traveling a lnt and not getting much sleep," he remem-bers. "I was real tired and I wasn't expecting them to be there at all. They pulled over behind me and jumped out of their car and started getting into my trunk, which I had un-locked at the restaurant. But they took much longer to make the switch than I had expected.

"While they were getting in, I saw headlights coming behind us. I thought, Jeez, folks, hurry up, would you? Maybe we should just call off the whole thing right now. But it was the last chance, so I decided to go for broke. The car drove an hy. I jumped nut and shut the trunk and drove off.

Then began, for Alan Van Norman, a nine-month captivity in an Orwellian world of gray walls, empty corridors and shouting interrogators - a world that forced him to battle to keep his sanity and drove him at times, he says, to consider suicide. "I was never really physically mistreated," he says, "and I never saw anyone who really was. But the psychological pressures were very, very hard."

One of the things that prohably helped save him, he says, was the absurd, comic-opera blustering of his captors. "The officer who arrested me was dressed in one of those baggy, shapeless uniforms those baggy, shapeless uniforms you see in socialist countries: ooe size fits all. Mr. Van Norman had been arrested at 2:55 a.m. He was ques-tioned until 6. "It was all in German, which was pretty stupid. I told them over and over again I didn't speak German, but they didn't want to wait for an interpreter. A couple of people there knew a few English words and they tried to do what they could, but that just confused the issue.

"When they couldn't make me understand, they just yelled louder and laster. It was a ridiculous kind nf ioterrogation. I finally got so tired about 5 a.m. I just fell asleep while they were shouting at me. They were pretty upset about that."

Self-questioning, debate and re-crimination on the left was natural after widely expected victory at the polls turned into a resounding loss. However, the questioning has come more quickly, loudly and profaund-ly than had seemed probable.

The traditional influence of French leftist thought throughout Europe has added to the importance of the effort here to eircumvent the official Communist road-route nonstop. A second British carrier remains to be named. Mr. Carter's order confirmed an

April 19 recommendation by the Civil Aeronautics Board that Los Angeles be chosen over Boston as the U.S. city, in addition to New York, with "dual designation" to provide the competitive nonstop service to London authorized under a 1977 agreement with Britain. Twelve U.S. cities have been cleared for single-carrier service to Londoo.

Boston, which opposed the CAB recommendation in a rearguard court action, still hopes for "dual designation" under a new interim agreement with Britain. Mr. Carter wrote Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Friday directing him to con-tinue to seek British acceptance of a new interim agreement, which the president first proposed in a May 16 letter to British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

"They didn't think I'd crack up io there," he says. "They used to write me letters saying. We have great faith in your hard head."

Mr. Van Norman emerged with characteristic wry humor, a Woody Allen figure who smuggled his prison clothes out with him as a joke on his captors and, perhaps, on himself. When asked at a Berlin press conference what he would do now, he replied, "Oh, t don't know, Maybe go have a beer."

But now that he is back at his parent's home, he finds that he has changed. "I think the greatest thing I learned to prison is how much we waste - wbether it's time or simply materials. When I got back, I brought a friend of mine a present. and she took it out of the box and threw the box away. I was appalled. "In prison, if we had had a box like that, we would have cut it up to make playing cards. Or a chess set. Or papier-mache dice. We saved everything. One man had found the pull-tab off a zipper and had used it to unscrew a tiny screw and he carried those things around for months. Everyone envied him for having such valuable things. Can Africa Military Regimes Restore Civilian Rule?

By David Lamb

TAIROBI — The military governments of three African nations — Ghana, Upper Volta and Nigeria — are laying the foundatino for returning to civilian rule. All are finding it a difficult transition, full of obstacles and temptations.

No military government in Africa has ever surrendered power voluntority. In fact, oo government has ever changed hands peacefully through the electoral process in the 20 years since colonial Africa started breaking up into independent nations. Some political observers cootend that a multiparty democratic system is a luxury that Africa cannot afford at this stage of its development. It was to refute that argument that the governments of Ghana, Upper Volta and Nigeria embarked on their plans for civilian rule. Of the three. Ghana is having the most difficult time, and the intentions of its government are the most open to suspicion. Pressured to step down by a middle-class revolt last year. Ghana's government realized it had not the slightest chance of winning an election against

Ghana's Union Plan

So the head of state, Gen. Ignatius Kutu Acheampong, 46, who seized power in 1972, pushed forward a plan for a union government that would include both civilian and military elements. On March 30. fewer than 43 percent of the eligible voters went to the polls and, according to the government, endorsed the union proposal by a margio of 53 percent to 47 percent.

Gen. Acheampong's first response was to ban the three largest anti-government parties, saying. "There is no further justification for the existence of political parties." Within a week, 17 leading civilian politicians were arrested, and dozens of others, including the electoral commissioner, fled into hiding or exile.

Despite charges that the referendum was rigged, Gen. Acheampong is proceeding with plans for a general election, June 15, 1979, and a return to constitutional government two weeks later. If Gen. Acheampong survives politically that long, the name of Ghana's probable president is hardly a secret. In Upper Volta, where the military government is probably the most liberal io Africa, President Sangoule Lamizana, 62, was telling confidents only a few mooths ago that he was ready to retire from military and political life when the soldiers returned to the harracks this year. But when Upper Voltans went to the polls May 14, Gen. Lamizana was a candidate for president. He failed to win the occided majority agaiost seven opposition parties, and a runoff election was scheduled.

Gen. Lamizana plans to form soon Upper Volta's first civilian government in 13 years, but he has let it be known that the 9,000-man army is waiting in the wings if the experiment fails.

Nigeria has taken the most meticulous steps among Africa's 19 military governments to revert to civilian rule. The military seized power in Africa's most populous country in 1966 and has been making plans for four years to relinquish power in November next year. It has debated and drafted a new constitution, which provides for n

U.S.-style system including a president, a senate and a house of representatives. Most neutral observers believe that the Nigerian head of state, Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo. 40, is firmly committed to the promise of — and the timetable for — civilian rule. The transition appeared to be going smoothly until last month, when bloody clashes between students and soldiers erupted on several university campuses. The apparent cause was an announcement increasing boarding fees for students. The military, bowever, contends that the students were being used by "unpatriotic and hostile interests" intent on disrupting plans for a civilian government.

Dollar Bond Price-Gains Pared; Reopened DM Sector Uncertain

By William Ellington

LONDON, June 11 (AP-DJ) -Eurodollar bond prices rose last week as dealers repurchased bonds they had sold short earlier. However gains were pared late in the week, particularly after a large weekly increase in the U.S. money supply was disclosed.

Market participants said that much of the week's activity seemed to be confined to inter-dealer trans-actions. They said that most insti-tutional portfolio managers and retail investors were refraining from making commitments because the outlook for interest rates and exchange rates is still uncertaio.

Nevertheless, some of the pessi-mism hanging over the market seemed to have lifted. "If you can look far enough ahead, say, six to nine months, both the the rate of (U.S.) inflation and the rise in in-(U.S.) inflation and the rise in in-terest rates will have peaked," a portfolio adviser at a U.K. mer-chant bank predicted. He cootend-ed that purchases now of six- to eight-year Eurodollar bonds with a yield of 9 or more percent will turn out to be very attractive.

Io the market, a recent $75-million, eight-year issue of National Westminster Bank bearing 9 per-cent moved up during the week to around 99.38 from 98.88 the previous week while Canadair's $70-million, 85 percent notes of 1983 advanced to 97.38 from 97.

This improved market tooe for a high-quality Eurobond issue in years. This feature, it was argued, would protect investors from capital loss and thereby overcome qualms about investing longterm. Also on offer is a $22-million. seven-year private placement of Den Norske Industribank at par with a coupon of 8.75 percent. Guaranteed by the Norwegian gov-ernment, the issue was said to be selling quite well.

The present uousual combinatioo of rising dollar bood yields and rising U.S. share prices makes offerings of convertible issues particularly attractive to U.S. corpora-tions. This is because they can offer low-coupon coovertible boods and use the proceeds to repurchase straight deht issues which would cormally be selling at sizeable discounts from par as the result of yields being forced up. A converti-ble issue at this particular time affords B corporation an opportunity to repurchase deht and make a saving on priocipal repayments. Such a saving can be brought directly into profits. Convertibles also reduce the interest charge.

Baker International may have such a strategy in mind. It is offering a $30-million, 15-year convertible with a 5.5 percent annual coupon. The boods will be converted into the oil equipment producer's common stock after Jan. prompted the scheduling of two straight dollar issues. A $50-million, 15-year issue of Quebec Hydro bearing a hefty 9.5 percent oflion, 19, when the final terms will olso ended the week in the loss column. Traders were very reluctant to buy live cattle futures early in the week in the face of widespread predictions that President Carter was going to adjust foreign beef import quotas. The president announced late Thursday the quotas would be raised to allow 200 million pounds of low-grade beef to be imported this year to ease domestic beef prices that bad riseo to record levels in April. Some administration officials said the action would save consumers up to B oickel a pound later this year, but others said the effect would be only a cent or two. The meat industry, farmers and congressional critics quickly criticized the move.

Soybean and grain futures prices on the Chicago Board of Trade wound up a week of mostly light trading on the minus side under pressure of several bearish influences. In New York, metal prices

Live hogs futures drifted lower for the week oo the Mercantile Exchange, and pork bellies (bacon) dropped to their lowest level since January on the basis of steadily adequate supplies.

Prices on the Chicago Board of Trade also were lower for the week. Traders attributed the losses to extremely favorable Midwest weather that allowed near-completion of corn and soybeans planting. Soybean futures ended the week 4 to 13½ cents a bushel lower, with July cootracts quoted at $6.90 B bushel; wheat was 6 to 7½ cents lower, July $3.17½; corn was 2½ to 4½ cents lower, July $2.56¼; and oats were 5¼ to 7½ cents lower, with July cootracts oated for retirement of the compaoy's loog-term debt.

NEW YORK, June 11 (NYT) — For the last quarter-century, Juoe has been the poorest month for stock-market performance, but prices ignored precedent last week and continued to push ahead. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 11.69 points to 859.23 after climbing nearly 16 points in the previous week. Some issues that are not included among the 30 Dow industrials scored spectacular gains. One outstanding example on Friday was Union Bancorp, a bank holding company that is the parent of Union Bank, the sixth largest hank in California. NEW YORK, June 11 (NYT) -The urgency of the messages reaching Washington about the concern of Americans for mounting eco-comic problems has been under-scored recently — by consumers.

businessmen and even politicians. In several state primary elections, voters last week dramatically telegraphed their anxiety over infla-tion, taxes and governmental cooduct, calling on their representa-tives to draw the line on increased taxes and spending. Their worries have been expressed also in recent surveys that have shown a decline in consumer confidence, and through the cootinued hesitancy of spending programs.

The stock market appeared to he B ootable exception to the wave of pessimism, having resumed its spring offensive with heavy trading and higher prices after a one-week hiatus for profit taking. President Carter took another small step to try to aid the situatioo on Thursday, when he authorized an iocrease in beef imports. But that is not expected to do much to weaken the surge in beef prices or aid the overall inflation battle.

No bank today can afford to stand still. At A P Bank we are taking this literally. We're changing our address. From today you will find us at:

21 Great Winchester Street, London, EC2N 2HH. (Our telephone and telex numbers remain unchanged.)

In our new offices we will continue to provide all our customary services backed by the specialised expertise and high standards of personal attention which have been our trademark over the years.

The REC 30 is a bundle of pure magic. This rare earth cobalt magnet has a maximum energy product of 30MGOe, the highest anywhere in the world. This means it works wonders in today's electrical and electronics products. Like in those super-slim radios everybody seems to be carrying around nowadays.

Our REC 30 can help you put a little magic into your products by making them so much smaller and reliably.

We've never really thought of ourselves as magicians even though many of our ferrite magnets, ceramic capacitors, coils, transformers, filters and magnetic tapes have cast their spell over the years. We're just specialists, content to keep ahead.

We have mastered the tricks of the magnetic trade as a specialist making them work better and more ferrite manufacturer in just over 20 years, and so we can assure you thatwhatever our magnets do, it's not all done with mirrors but with R&D and imagination.

For syndicated loans, proven - leadership is decisive.

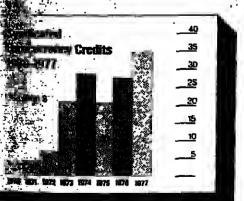

Often the heavy loan demand of large borrowers can best be met by the formation of a syndicate of international banks. The decisive elements for a bank's success in the syndicated loan field are its reputation, flexibility, know-how, and its interbank relationships worldwide.

> Commerzbank is an established factor in this et, with an excellent record as lead manager or commanager of syndicated loans for an impressive number of prime addresses. The Bank's flexibility is enlanced by presence in such financial centers abroad as Livembourg, London, and New York, enabling it to of mell-over credits in most major currencies. If required, these credits can be converted into long-term financings through Eurobond issues.

Internationally oriented since its establishmentin 1870, Commerzbank is known and appreciated as one of Germany's leading financial institutions, offering the full range of commercial and investment banking services.

This background and proven leadership

re sound reasons for considering Commerzbank for your financing needs.

Grindlays A name you can bank on around the world

Banking on Grindlays means more than taking advantage of the Group's network of branches in some 35 countries. It means working closely with our specialists in such fields as export finance, foreign exchange, eurocurrency finance, and corporate banking. They take full advantage of the regional knowledge and support provided by over 200 Group branches and offices located in most of the major world markets. This teamwork provides the right financial products and packages at the right time.

The Group's Eurocurrency Department continues to be active in providing governments and government agencies.
Recent managed syndications include those to the Bolivian State Petroleum organisation, the Jordan Hotels and Tonrism Company and Beogradska Banka

The Grindlays' presence in important markets has recently been strengthened with the opening of offices in New York and South Korea.

If you want to attract attention in Europe, we can put your name in lights.

We know the market.

After all it was one of our countrymen, Van de Bursen of Bruges, who originated and gave his name to the "Bourse"-French for Stock Exchange.

So it seems only right that a Belgian bank ours-has originated a new way to use the Belgian Stock Exchange. We've opened it to international companies so that they can get known in Europe and have access to the European Capital Market.

Ever since 1952 we have used this unique method to put foreign businesses on the Board. Businesses like I.B.M., INCO, General Motors, Pettreot

We offer you international connections too. We don't just have 1000 retail branches in Belgium. We also have an international network of subsidiuries, representatives, affiliates, associates, correspondents, and banking communities like SFE and Associated Banks of Europe (ABECOR).

With this network we can help get your name known round the world. Plus offer you the same range of financial services you expect from any major international investment bank.

But what makes us different from these other banks is our individual attention to each client's individual needs; our reluctance to stick to the same old answers; and our willingness to try out new bonds. At the same time, non-residents do not have much of an incentive to buy Euromark bonds unless they firmly believe that the mark will appreciate substantially against the dollar. Yields on dollar bonds are three to four percentage points higher than the DM equivalent so that a considerable appreciation of the mark would be needed for the investor to come out even on a DM investment In a recent tender offer, the German government sold about 1.39 billion DM of three-year notes at 99.9 bearing.5 percent to yield 5.04 percent and about 1.27 billion DM of four-year notes at 99.9 bearing 5.25 percent to yield 5.28 percent in comparison, Norway's recent 250 million-DM, five-year notes bearing 4.375 percent were trading at 97.25 to yield 5.01 percent. Meznwhile, the Bundesbank has just announced a 750-million DM. 10-year issue of the federal railways at 99 bearing 6 percent to yield 6.14

In the Eurobond market, a 100million DM, 10-year issue of Elf-Aquitaine bearing 5.25 percent was trading at 95.5 to yield 5.86 per-cent. Thus, it would seem likely that a substantial downward adinstment of Euromark bond prices will be needed before the yields are attractive to residents.

The offerings approved by the capital market subcommittee comprise a 100-million DM bond for the city of Kobe; a 100-million DM issue for Austria; a 100-mildion DM issue for Norges Kommunalbank and a 30-million DM issue for Ricoh, the Japanese office equipment company.

Eurobond offerings in Deutsche marks had been suspended on May 12 after it became apparent that the market had not been able to absorb heavy volume of new issues.

Commerzbank announced that its previously announced 100-mil- Cedel lion DM bond with warrants, being Eurocl.

offered by its Luxembourg subsidiary, would be priced at par and carry a coupon of 3.5 percent. The 10-year bond will be offered until June 16. The warrants give purchasers the right to buy five shares for 218

After British authorities introduced a credit squeeze last week to hreak rapid expansion of the domestic money supply, the market outlook for sterling-denominated Eurobonds appeared to be grim. On the one hand, the cost to dealers of financing positions was forced up to the point where bond inventories at present prices have. to be financed at a loss. On the other hand, yields available on domestic U.K. government bond is-sues were still more than a point higher than Eurosterling yields so that dealers had little hope of finding huyers for such issues unless they marked their prices down Citicorp's £25-million, 10 percent bonds of 1993 were quoted at around 90.25 to yield 11.38 percent at maturity. In comparison, a 15-year, 12.5 percent U.K. Treasury is-sue was available at 98.38 to yield 13.15 percent on a Eurobond equivalent basis. Meanwhile, one-month interbank. Eurosterling deposits were quoted at 12.38 percent of-fered Friday compared with the current yield for Citicorp's issue of 11.08 percent.

Larry Bird, a 6-foot-9 All-American from Indiana State, was the player rated most likely to succeed by the pro scouts. But Bird has one year of college eligibility left and says he intends to play f or Indiana State next winter, so the Blazers decided to go for the sure thing in Friday's draft.

Originally, the No.-1 pick be-longed to Indiana. But when the Pacers were unable to talk Bird into signing, they swapped that choice to Portland in exchange for guard Johnny Davis and the No.-3 pick overall, which they used to take 6-10 forward Rick Robey of Kentuc-

In all, five teams passed on Bird before the Boston Celtics decided to take the gamble. Kansas City, picking second, took All-American guard Phil Ford of North Carolina. The Kings hope their backcourt problems are solved for years to come with Ford and last year's No.

LAS VEGAS, June 11 (NYT) -For more than a decade, Muhammad Ali has been proclaiming, "and when I retire, the game will go to the graveyard." But Friday night Larry Holmes and Ken Norton provided the disclaimer.

In a reminder that boxing is bigger than any boxer, their brawling struggle for the World Boxing Council's championship was the most memorable heavyweight title light since "The Thrilla in Manila" when Ali and Joe Frazier destroyed each other nearly three years ago. Larry Holmes emerged as a semi-champion, as Leon Spinks is. And even if Ali were to dethrone Leon Spinks in their Sept. 15 rematch in New Orleans, the Ali era is all but over. It will linger but it's over.

The heavyweight division now belongs to Larry Holmes, Ken Norton, Leon Spinks, perhaps Jimmy Young if he gets back in shape and yard.

Classic Round

On my score card Friday night, 142; translated into rounds, that's 51 8-6 with one even, the 15th. As that lorio 5-6) classic round ended, I marked it for Norton but changed it to even because neither boxer deserved to local lose it. Although I had Norton see ahead, I have no loud quarrel with the two judges who voted for Holmes, 143-142, or 8-7 in rounds. The fight was too close for a loud quarrel. Not even Norton had a loud quarrel, unlike his disenchantment when Ali was awarded a controversial spht decision over him at troversial spht decision over him at Yankee Stadium nearly two years

"I knew I won that one very, very decisively." Norton said. "This I thought I won, but it was a close chicose fight. Larry fought gallantly. I'm not as dejected as against Ali."

Norton also acknowledged having made a mistake in letting Holmes win the first few rounds, hoping that the challenger would "spend his energy." That was the same mistake Ali made against Spinks four months ago. Even though Ali was giving away 12 years to Spinks, while Norton was giving away four years to Holmes, it's strange that an older boxer should assume that a younger boxer will tire sooner. Norton always makes a mistake that costs him a big fight. In each of his two losses to Ali, he did not do enough in the last round to im-

"The Changeling" suggests to me that two things ought to be done about avant- garde writing today: Readers ought to actively question its assumption that a character's mental disturbance is a symbol for B disturbed world. It is not invariably true: Sometimes a character's aberration is a circumscribed func-tion that concerns no more than two or three people. In try to stretch it to embrace our entire cul-ture is either pretentious. lazy, or simply mistaken.

And then I believe it would be a salutory exercise for both reader and writer if we begin to take the rhetoric of the avant-garde literally.

was a startlingly good novel, and it pains me to have to say that "The Changeling" is a startlingly bad one. Miss. Williams likes to take large sicks to take to take to take to take the total to take the total to take the total t large risks, to try to go where no one has gone before. She is more drastic in her approach to character drastic in her approach to character than any other novelist I can think in who is writing today. In "State of Grace," she survives the risks by the skin of her teeth and her narrow escapes have the effect of intensifying the book even further. But harsh as it may sound, I find that almost nothing works in "The Changeling." I admire the first book so much that I am tempted to take the position that only a very take the position that only a very talented person could write as bad-ly as Miss Williams does in her second novel. The eccentricity of the characters in "State of Grace" seems to arise out of a surplus of truth. They are so real, so close to the bone of feeling, that it is hard to get used to them. They are natural to an unnatnral degree. Miss Williams' beroine, Kate, has answers to questions no one would ever think to ask. Pearl, in "The Changeling." has no answers and to questions no one would want to ask. While Kate transcends the natural, Pearl falls

Kate is passive because she wants something better than the choices she sees before her. When she stops to think about what there is that may be worth doing, she says: "I'm taking time off and I may never take it on again." She "It's difficult to tell at the end of the day whether it was theory or need that got you through it." Pearl has neither theory nor need. She seems to wait for catastrophe and you know right away that her catastrophe, if it comes, will oot be interesting. She simply does oot have the capacity for it.

The story line of "The Changel-ing" is an arbitrary muddle about a young woman who is more or less kidnapped by a man who marries her and takes her to live on an island that is owned by his family. Walker, the man, meets Pearl while she is recklessly shoplifting in a department store. Why an attractive and intelligent man would want an almost catatonic girl like Pearl — who drinks endlessly and com-plains endlessly of being tired and any way you look at her is a mess—would undoubtedly be considered an unimaginative question in today's critical context.

Living on the island is Miriam. who makes "cosmic" skirts out of patchwork pieces of personal history which strangers send to her, such as the pillowease of a suicide. Thomas, Walker's hrother, who is raising eight or 10 adopted children hy cultivating their spiritual selves;

By Robert Byrne ...

If your opponent invites you into a sharp opening variation that you do not know how to proceed against, it is a good idea to turn the game off into a quiet positional byway, even if you gain little or nothing by doing so.

For one thing, opponents are a suspicious lot and will immediately begin worrying about whether there is quicksand lurking under what appears to be — and is — hospitable terrain. Shaken by the harmless, they may make harmful blund-Then there is the overconfident type who quickly assumes that your choice of variation brands you a coward who merits little attention. Even if you can muster only one trap in the position, this species of opponent is likely to fall into it.

A more complicated error occurred in the encounter between international master Jonathan Mestel of England and U.S. master John Fedorowicz in the third round of the Hastings loternational Tournament. Fedorowicz spotted the theme of the trap in Mestel's tame opening, but then fell into it one move later.

Brazil, three times winner of the World Soccer Cup, lived tip to its separation today to defeat Austria. 1-d, and claim a place in the second round of the tournament.

A brilliant passing move allowed Roberto to score the winning goal with a left-foot shot into the roof of the net in the 38th minute.

Austria and Brazil both finished the first round with four points from three games, but Austria took top place in Group 3 with a better goal record — 3-2 — compared with Brazil's 2-1.

Spain edged Sweden 1-0 in the other Group 3 game. Both teams were eliminated. Both went into the match hoping for a second-round berth, but they relied on Austria to beat Brazil.

spraying magnums of champagne. The victory culminated a three-year effort by Renault to capture the world's major automobile en-durance race. Millions of dollars were spent, at the French taxpayer's expense since the company has long been nationalized.

Jabouillo attempted to get the car running again but, without the mechanics and tools waiting in the pit and barred from the rest of the course, he failed. The car was finally pushed into a meadow where it sat for spectators' photographs for an hour before being towed home.

The engine failure was ominous for Renault, since its cars bave a reputation for succumbing to com-mon problems. Another Renault, driven by Jean-Pierre Jarier and Derek Bell, abandoned the race at 3 a.m. with engine trouble and a Mirage with a Renault engine bad two breakdowns.

So for the last six hours of the race the Renault pits were full of people with long faces, waiting for the rest of the bad news. To their relief, it never arrived.

But, as one suspected, without the injured Leopoldo Luque, Argentina had no hife, no support in the center, where Kempes looked stranded and inadequate between the two wingers. There was, however, one ploy Argentina was pre-pared to try to the full: the intimidating effect of the crowd on Israeli referee Abraham Klein. He proved to be exactly the man he had been chosen to be: impeccably fair, impressively brave.

Benetti Gets Card

That said, be had a remarkably easy job controlling the players. He booked Benetti, the Italian hatchet man who buried his boot needlessly into an Argentine face (a pity, for in this competition, Benetti is revealing the experienced, alert touchplay of his colleagues), but for all that, Beneto and one or two Argentines were prepared to kick each other on the floor behind the referee's back, it never looked like exploding. The final thought on this match is that we were so wrong to doubt Italy's will to win. Manager Enzo Bearzot had considered leaving out several players, including Paolo Rossi, but they insisted on being in the team. And, when you consider the strength of character of men like Rossi, the new boy who had signed an amnesty protest against Argentina before coming here, you understand why Bearzot gave in.

Germany, Tunisia Draw

Earlier yesterday, defending champion West Germany was held to a goalless draw by Tunisia, the surprise team of this World Cup. Following its 3-1 victory over Mexico - the first victory in a World Cup final by an African representa-tive — Tunisia unluckily finished a goal down after nutplaying Poland in the second half and yesterday confirmed their sophisticated form hy defending well at the end after taking the game to Germany initially.

There are, of course, rumors that West Germany is happy to finish second to Poland in its group, happy that this means it will not have to move its headquarters from Cordoba. Yet that is to deny Tunisia the accolade we passed last week: that they are the first of the African nations (albeit, scarcely from darkest Africa) to emerge toward world to veto any trades.

Poland Defeats Mexico

Poland topped its group by beating the hapless Mexicans, 3-1, with two goals by midfielder Abigniew Boniek and one by Kazimierz Deyna after Victor Rangel had given Mexico hope with an equalizer.

France Beats Hungary, 3-1

The fourth game yesterday might conceivably have been the best if for no reason other than the pres-sure was off. France and Hungary are out of the tournament and, in the case of the French, their absence will leave a gap. They have produced the most entertaining midfield touches, usually from the visionary play of Michel Platini, yet have been unable to strike home their advantage. Ironically yesterday, they introduced Marc Berdoll, their third center-forward, and his superbly mobile foraging found the necessary penetration for France to score three times — a spectacular 25-yard shot from Christian Lopez, one from Berdoll from 15 yards, one from Berdoll from 15 yards, turning cleverly against two defenders, and one from winger Dominique Rocheteau. Finding the narrowest of gaps, Hungary, which never played to its full potential, bad but one answer, another goal of the highest quality, this time. of the highest quality, this time from 20 yards from Sandor Zambo-

So, can we for once in this contentious World Cup finish a report without an acrimonious note? Certainly we can, if we ignore the fact that Sweden, still with a chance of qualifying in the Mar del Plata group, has protested informally the referee for today's crucial match between Brazil and Austria, the referee in question is Robert Wurtz from France, who, say the Swedes, is a frequent guest of the Brazilian sports confederation.

FIFA, the authority of world soccer, took no action, but if Brazil, whose manager, Claudio Coutinho, hangs on despite having lost sole charge of team selection, snatches the qualifying place, the reaction from Sweden may be bitter indeed.

He had me shown out by a policeman who was being paid with my tax money.

There is no free shelter," I told him. "You should bave cut taxes while you still bad a chance. Now it's too late. The guillotines are already going up in every polling booth in the country.

Upcburch begged for a scrap from the table. It made me remember that he had taxed the table at 8 percent at the time of purchase, him that taxed the pay of the people again.

New YORK — Street mobs who had made the table and the were burning their propertylax bills in towering bonfires and the table, and taxed the purchase of hanging politicians' limousines in effigy. A desperale knock at the

It made me remember tax tables.

"There are no free scraps, Upchurch." I told him. "Turn on the light and I'll show you something." he said. It remind-ed me that he had taxed the light as well as the light hulb and the lamp which contained the light hulb that gave the light. "There is no free light, Upchurch." I said. "I want you to see how terrible.! look." he murmured. "I haven't shaved for 36 hours, Please — just let me use your razor.

He had taxed that razor. He had taxed my shaving cream. He had taxed the sink and the plumbing. He had taxed the house that contained the razor, the shaving cream, the sink and the plumbing. And after taxing them, I recalled, I had written to him asking if he could pass a special bill authorizing the government to seod me enough money for a pair of pants, and he sent back a form letter which said. There are no free pants."

"There are no free shaves, Upchurch," I said.

*Out, Upchurch! Into the streets. Take your chances with the mobs."
"Think of all I've done for the country," he cried.

I thought "Aren't you one of that gang that voted to make peo-ple fill our estimated-income-tax forms after they've finished filling out their income-tax forms?" I

Lying as usual, he denied it, but I knew better, "Upcburch," I told him, "if I've got to guess bow mucb money. I'm going to make oext year, you've got to guess what'll happen to you when I throw you back into the street."

He put up a struggle, which dido't surprise me, since be had heen working out in a congressional gymnasium built and operated with my tax mooey. There are oo free muscles, except for politicians. And so he is still here. I would go out, but he has just levied an exit tax and I am short of casb. I would ask the public to send contribu-tions, but it would only encourage him to raise the price of stamps

'It is in great danger because of the quarries underneath if the builders do not take precautions instantly.'

Montmartre Organizes Its Own Defense

By Aline Mosby

PARIS (UPI) — Monimartre is moving. The hill of Monimartre, cherished by tourists and artists and plain Parisians since the third century, is developing cracks, holes and cave-ins in its old age.

The villains are two: the galleries of stone quarries upon which the Montmartre quarter was huilt and rehuilt, and the enthusiastic huilding promoters of the 1970s who want to construct costly new apartments on the precarious little hill.

The crisis has Montmartrians in a near panic. Neighborhood clubs to save Montmartre have been formed and are holding news conferences, knocking on doors to mobilize the neighborhood, doing research into geo-logical formations and dispatching delegations to the Paris City

"Montmartre is known throughout the world." declared Maud Garzon, one of the activists who formed the Association for the Defense of Montmartre. "It is in great danger because of the quarries underneath if huilders do not take precautions instantly."

The association's outcry has forced the city's Bureau of Geo-logical and Mine Research to order an official study of the old

Group's Demands

The association has demanded a halt to all construction on Montmartre pending results of the study. The bureau made a similar study some years ago and discovered that the Montmartre "village" was slipping gradually

Mrs. Garzon's sixth floor walkup flat in a 19th-century building has a glorious view of the soft gray rooftops and monu-ments of Paris from the Eiffel Tower to Notre Dame Cathedral. Across Rue Gabrielle, her neighbor and fellow activist in the association, Irene Marin, lives in a one-time artist's atelier with enormous skylights dating from the era when Utrillo and Toulouse-Lautrec strolled the inding streets.

But what are those holes on the sidewalk up the street at No. 43 Rue Gabrielle next to a construction site?

Betweeo 1877 and 1880, five houses vanished into huge holes formed by the crumbling cavelike quarries underground.

"We do not want to see our apartments cave in," said Mrs. Garzon, "My building already moved s bit in 1930." After months of buttonholing geologists and engineers, the activists concluded that "if the stability and balance of the ground under Montmartre is compromised by planned building, the holes could crumble with serious repercussions for everyone who

So many stones from Montmartre were cut to construct Paris that a French saying goes: There is more of Montmartre

One of the quarter's most charming streets, Rue Lepic, where artist Vincent van Gogh later lived, was the road leading to the entrances of the quarries. Place Blanche (White Square) was so named because of plas-ter-filled carts rumbling out of the quarries.

In the French Revolution, the abbesses of the coovent were dispatched to the guillotine, the convent buildings razed and the gypsum quarries closed along with 30 grain mills.

Artists and writers settled on the bill io the 19th century. In the 20th century the artistic cen-

a village — small, faded bouses clinging to the winding streets, even a tiny cemetery and one re-maining vineyard where Montmartrians with great ceremony celebrate a tiny harvest each September.
The Association for the Defense of Montmartre fears that this beauty, too, will disappear if building promoters continue construction which began with the mid-1960s modernization of

Special Department

Since the disasters of the late 19th century, the city of Paris has a special department to deal with construction atop the ancient quarries. Permits now are given to huilders who anchor deep foundations that would not rest atop the fragile quarries. ..

But Mrs. Garzon and other Montmartrians have gathered evidence of cracks and huge holes that they claim appeared when the underground was trifled with such as gaps in the sidewalks of the Rue des Mar-

The Sacre Coeur Church is safe, not being built over quar-ries. But the old Bateau-Lavoir studios where Pablo Picasso and other painters worked "is in great danger of collapse," Mrs. Garzon said.

Montmartrians also are campaigning against a new apart-ment building going up next to a 600-year-old windmill, all that remains of the Moulin-de-la-Gallette dance hall immortalized in paintings by Renoir and Van Gogh. Mrs. Garzon and Mrs. Marin have taken photographs of what they say was a cave-in at the construction site.

"We all love Montmartre but there are problems," she said. One man told us that after the building next to bis was remodeled, an underground spring appeared in his basement."

PEOPLE: Yevrusnenno Man Yevtushenko Marries

Yevgeny Yevtushenko, the Soviet Union's best-known poet, has re-portedly married an English wom-an who has been his translator and assistant for three years. The poet's bride is Jan Butler, 25. The marriage took place in Moscow April 20, hut was kept secret, according to British press reports. Yevtushen-ko, 43, has been married before. He met Miss Butler when she was a post-graduate student at Moscow University. She had earlier studied Russian at Camhridge. * * *

He was socially prominent, an impeccable lawyer, and he bad the Midas touch. He borrowed hundreds of thousands of dollars from acquaintances over six years, but he carefully paid interest of 50 percent a year. He told the lenders he was involved in cattle investing in Canada. The only problem was that his cattle didn't exist. Last November, newspapers reported that the law-yer, Joseph Watters, of New Orleans, had confessed to fraud. A law partner put the losses at $1.25 million to $1.5 million, and no one could explain what Watters had done with all that money. "It started off very innocent." Watters says at the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., where he is serving five years, the maximum sentence. "I borrowed money besentence. "I borrowed money be-cause I needed it and couldn't get it from conventional sources." Then it snowballed. "People get a glint in their eye when you say, 'You get 50 percent return on your money, " Watters observes. With such high interest to meet, "the majority of the funds went from Peter to pay Paul," he says. But about $70,000, he reports, went into real estate. he reports, went into real estate, and about $40,000 evaporated in the casinos of Las Vegas, he says. Watters was indicted for fraud in the loss of $582,000, "There will be a fair amount of restitution," he says, through the sale of his real estate. He has been disbarred and is now a law clerk in the prison, helping inmates who cannot afford
